DIES BUT PLAN MISSES

HOUSTON, Tex., June 12.—(AP)—A landowner almost killed his suicide, police said today. Stanford Twente, 50, walked into the press box at the Houston baseball park last night, sat in front of a television camera, and fired a shot into his temple.

He died a short time later in a Houston hospital without knowing that his plan only partially succeeded. The camera was focused on the diamond, where the Tulsa Oilers were playing.

Twente told the press box he was the sixth victim of a Texas league game. Television fans did not see Twente put the gun to his temple but they heard the sound of the bullet and saw his body slump as the camera was whirled in his direction.

Justice of the Peace Tom Marx, who was viewing the game on a TV set, ruled without leaving his home that Twente's death was a suicide. He based his report on

Accused Sobs As Case Gets Started

An attractive bride of four months sobbed quietly in supreme court today as her trial opened for the slaying of Jim Poir, well-known city Chinaman.

In his opening address to the jury, Crown Prosecutor W. J. Shortreed stated the case will revolve around the question as to whether the killing was justified by the circumstances.

First witness this morning testified the woman had reported to police that the deceased had attacked her in his grocery store.

Charged with the April 20 murder of the Chinese grocer is 29-year-old Mrs. Marie Smith, 11025 84 street.

Dressed in a neat brown suit and white blouse, she sat with head lowered and eyes downcast as she listened to crown prosecutor W. J. Shortreed outline the evidence which would be brought against her.

She raised her head for the first time at the end of the morning sitting when she glanced at Mr. Justice A. J. McElride as he left the courtroom.

HUSBAND IN COURT
Sitting behind her in the audience was her husband.

As his bride was led to the cell after the morning hearing his eyes followed her anxiously. The accused did not raise his eyes to search for her husband.

Almost half the audience was composed of women who gathered in the corridor outside the courtroom waiting to be admitted. During the hearing dozens stood outside the courtroom attempting to hear proceedings through the closed door.

First witness to testify in the morning hearing was Const. William Maloney.

REPORT TO POLICE
The constable told the jury how the accused and her husband had reported to the police station at 2:15 a.m., April 20, and stated Mrs. Smith had been attacked by Jim Poir while she entered his grocery store at 90 street and 102A avenue.

"The Chinese reached for a knife," the constable said, describing Mr. Smith's report. "His wife also reached for it and she made good her reach first."

"She struck the Chinese with the knife," the constable continued, "and she feared he might be dead—either dead or wounded."

Heat Is On, More Coming This Way

It's warming up... and fast. Edmontonians sweated yesterday under 81 above, and they can expect 83 for today.

The bright Sunday saw an exodus of those fortunate enough to get to lake resorts, golf clubs and parks within the city were crowded during the day and the cooling-off process at night was found ideal for walks.

Today hundreds were gingerly feeling effects of the summer's first waves of sun.

WARM ALL OVER
Warm weather prevailed throughout most parts of Alberta yesterday as warm air moved in from the Pacific, causing temperatures to climb to the 80 above mark.

Grande Prairie, Calgary, Vermilion and Medicine Hat were only a few spots to mark the high temperatures.

No rain was reported over the weekend with the exception of the slight trace which fell in the city in the afternoon.

Summer Short-Cuts
For Homemakers' Aid

By Bea Thrifty

A happy, keep-cool day to you, Madam Homemaker! These summer scorcher-days tie a fine untangling idea to use all our short-cuts to meal-getting . . . to save our energies and tempers for the business of relaxing and enjoying the all-too-brief warm-weather season.

So I thought would be a handy idea to let you a few of my favorite "short-cuts" in homemaking. I've picked them up in passing through the years.

Here's a refrigerator cookie gem involving old tin cans in the kitchen.

You don't use the tin cans in the kitchen.

I don't know how many times I've applied butter over my many recipe cards while in the act of baking.

Hundred, tired of hearing me come to the rescue of the recipes and me with this bright idea. I suggested with un-banished diplomacy I put the card between lines of a dinner fork; then set, handle end down, in a glass or small jar.

I tried it reluctantly . . . and out the way of food spills.

Handy-dandy! Keel wool has its drawbacks too.

I'm forever using just a corner of a steel wool soap pad to remove a stubborn bit of grease . . . then putting pad away to finish it off later.

When time to use it comes again rusted and the soap may be used from too-frequent dunkings in dish-water.

Pen-wisely solution is to cut steel wool into half a dozen pieces. One section will last for dish-washing, then be thrown away.

Hurry-up desert was sliced banana "crust" last night and I found a new use for my pastry blender in my need for time-saving.

I used the blender which is a crescent of half a dozen wires on a flat wooden handle, to slice the bananas in uniform, neat pieces. Two or three cuts and a job was done . . . not half as much pieces as sliced a banana with a knife.

I've become a penny-pincher in my late days it fairly seems my goal to throw anything away . . . even pickle juice.

There's a use for it all right and this is it:

Use the juice left over from a jar of sweet pickles or old pickles to season French dressing . . . use as part vinegar (for recipe) . . . to this mayonnaise for coleslaw to taste baked ham.

You'll think of dozens of other uses too . . . so don't throw that pickle juice away.

Tomorrow we'll have another look at the fresh fruit situation . . . it's more than interesting these days isn't it?

Helpful Leaflets Can Solve Many Problems

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

This column is many years old and appears daily in a great number of papers, so that there are always new readers who are unfamiliar with its services and also its limitations of service.

This is not a medical column. A mother wastes the time it might take to find a cure for the child's illness, when she brings her problem here.

But, there are enough perplexities for every household where there are children, which are not medical in scope and which only have the busy doctor when the mother asks about them. With those I like to help.

Those which appear in the column and they have solved them successfully, they want to send their letters to the questioning mother. I would be happy to do this if I could. But it is as impossibility. No system of filing could ever be devised for keeping all the letters which come to this column.

I am always disappointed to have to tell a reader who directs a letter through me, that I have no way of delivering it to the mother for whom it is intended. But, if the solution is a good one, I am glad to let it be the column.

HELPFUL LEAFLETS
Letters take longer to be answered in the column (only six days) than when a self-addressed and 3 cents stamped envelope is enclosed. Also, this makes it possible for me to send helpful leaflets which may answer the question in greater detail than could be done in a letter.

For obvious reasons, no one reader may have all the 87 leaflets this column keeps on hand. But a letter will get as many leaflets as is necessary to clarify the problem.

Our leaflets No. 86 "How To Be A Good Parent," may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

CREAMED CHICKEN, HAM, LAMB OR VEAL IN TOAST BLANKETS
2 cups diced chicken, ham, lamb or veal
4 tbs. dripping or bacon fat
3 cups milk
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
2 tbs. chopped pimiento
2 lbs. green pepper
2 onions, mushrooms, optional
6 slices bread and butter

Make a white sauce with dripping and flour and milk and seasoning. Add pimiento, green pepper, mushrooms, onion, diced chicken, ham, veal or lamb. Serve hot in toast baskets. To make toast baskets, trip crust from bread, spread with butter, place in muffin pans, toast in hot oven until golden brown, 425 degrees F.

Tobe on Fashion—

Supper Separates For Terrace Suppers

The happy custom of outdoor suppers on a country terrace has become an integral part of our life in all parts of the country. Perhaps one of the reasons we all love it so much is that it gives us a chance to let go and dress up in what are almost fancy dress costumes.

It's the separates fashion that makes this possible—the gay full skirts, the amusing harem trousers, the beautiful bloomers, the silly little bare tops and cover-ups—all those charming bits and pieces that can be put together to make enchanting costumes.

So park your inhibitions in the house and come out on the terrace in the most exciting supper separates you can find.

For obvious reasons, no one reader may have all the 87 leaflets this column keeps on hand. But a letter will get as many leaflets as is necessary to clarify the problem.

TAWASI CLUB Race Of White Men May Live In Forest

Stories of a lost white race in unknown forests have often been the subject of many fabulous tales and legends. But during the past few decades, scientists are beginning to believe there may be just such a group of people who live in the wild forests on the narrow strip of land between North and South America.

In the unknown backlands of the Isthmus of Panama are some and once-powerful races—Arauc, Maya, Toltec and others. Today the brown folk in the Indian lands, which are rarely built by banana trees and coconuts, still hold tales of a strange race of people. They say these people live far inland and are tall, muscular, with fair hair, blue eyes and the speech of Englishmen.

A well-known explorer, who went on an expedition into the wild country, reported that he had been hindered by Indians who spoke Elizabethan English. But no one believed his story and accused him of being a liar or madman.

For many generations, the Indians have claimed that in a region of dense forests, there exists a race of white men.

Uncle Wiggily's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

As you may remember, in the stories before this one, Uncle Wiggily, with Sammie and Sue Little, the rabbits and Jackie Hoo-wow, the puppy dog, had joined the circus for a little while. It was just for fun.

Hoo-wow, the circus manager, had many animals in his show. One was Tiglion, who was a jolly little creature, part lion and part tiger. But he was kind and gentle.

Tiglion wanted to do tricks in the circus, but he was so clumsy that he was always stepping on his own paws and falling down.

"Perhaps I can teach you a trick so you may do it in the circus," said Uncle Wiggily to Tiglion one day.

"Oh, I wish you would," said Tiglion. "What is the trick?"

"Here is a funny brown bear I just found," said the rabbit wiggily. "Now if you could stand on your hind legs and march around the circus ring holding this bean on your nose, that would be a trick."

"Watch me do it," said Sue Little. "Put the bean on my nose," said Uncle Wiggily.

"Stand on your hind legs, Sue!" said Uncle Wiggily to the little animal girl. And when Sue had done this, Uncle Wiggily put the brown bean on her nose. "Now walk as if you were in the circus ring, Sue," said Uncle Wiggily. But before Sue could take one step, the bean flipped off her funny pink nose.

"It isn't as easy as it looks!" said Tiglion.

"No, it isn't," answered Sue.

"Let me try," begged Sammie the rabbit boy.

"Yes, you may try," said Uncle Wiggily. "Show Tiglion how you can balance the bean on your nose."

Sammie stood on his hind legs. The rabbit gentleman put the brown bean on Sammie's nose. "Now start walking!" said Uncle Wiggily. But before Sammie could take one step, "BING!" the bean flipped off his nose.

"Oh, dear!"

"Don't give up," said Uncle Wiggily kindly. "Try it, Tiglion."

But, suddenly, Hoo-wow shouted from across the big circus ring: "Tiglion, come here. I want you!"

"It's all right back, Uncle Wiggily," said Tiglion as he hurried to the circus manager. On the way, Tiglion tripped on his paws and fell down twice, but he jumped up and ran to Hoo-wow. In a little while Hoo-wow came running back. He only fell down twice this time.

"Uncle Wiggily, you have been doing so well, Tiglion. I want to tell you that you are in great danger. Please run away as fast as you can. Run away from the circus!"

Without stopping to ask why, Uncle Wiggily called: "Come on, Sammie, Sue, Jackie! We are in danger! We must run away!"

So they ran away from the circus.

Nuclear Power Prospect Recedes

Peace-time Development Won't Be As Early As Anticipated

OXFORD, England, June 12.—(CP)—The commercial development of nuclear energy from uranium is more difficult than had been supposed in the first flush of post-war enthusiasm, Sir John Cockcroft, director of Britain's atomic energy program, said recently in an address.

It would be impossible, he said, to predict its future for at least 10 years, during which time power plants would have to be built and operated experimentally.

Theoretically, the prospects for nuclear energy appeared good since the complete destruction of one ton of uranium by fission released as much energy as the burning of 3,000,000 tons of coal.

However, as an initial step, it would be necessary to develop nuclear power units for specialized purposes, where the cost of power was not important and the amount of uranium used was comparatively small.

It was also necessary to develop units which would utilize a higher proportion of the uranium than had been customary in wartime piles. He said present atomic piles in Britain were built to produce plutonium and the heat developed was at too low a temperature for use in power development.

Sir John said it was important for the world to achieve a secure basis for control of atomic energy. At the same time, he regarded as "greatly exaggerated" statements suggesting that reactions between the light elements were capable of destroying all life on this planet by "a single event."
